An overview:

Training Module One: Overview of Disability Bias For Emergency Management Planning Professionals

We will examine factors that contribute to people with disabilities not being involved in disaster planning for all phases of disasters. We will discuss people with access and functional needs (AFN), and how people with disabilities fall into this category. This section will also include a discussion of disability bias and sensitivity.

Training Module Two: Legal Obligations Of Emergency Management To People With Disabilities During Planning for Preparation, Mitigation, Response and Recovery Surrounding Disasters

This session will cover an overview of disability rights laws, starting with a definition of disability under the ADA as amended and under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. You'll learn your obligations to provide accessible programs and services throughout disasters and emergencies, with examples, explanations, discussion, and strategies.
